

The Pop-Up Jungle Book

A bit of a stretch · Indoors · Grown-up nearby · Ages 6–10 · 35 min

Brought to you by Zech — “One sheet of paper. A hundred possibilities.”

Build a jungle that stands up off the page, then hide an animal so well that a grown-up needs three guesses.

WHAT YOU NEED

- 3 sheets of paper or thin card
- Safety scissors
- Glue stick or tape
- Green and brown markers

BEFORE YOU START

A grown-up should be nearby for the cutting steps.

Cut away from your body, and keep the closed scissors pointing down when you walk.

How to make it

- 1 Fold a sheet of paper in half like a card. This is your jungle page.
- 2 On the folded edge, cut two short parallel slits about 4 cm apart. Do not cut all the way across.
- 3 Open the card and push the strip between the slits inwards so it pops forward. That is your first jungle platform.
- 4 Draw and cut out a tall tree, then glue it to the front of the popped-out strip.
- 5 Draw an animal that lives in a jungle. Color it so it almost matches the tree behind it.
- 6 Glue the animal on and close the book. Open it for someone and see how long they take to spot the animal.

TALK ABOUT IT

If your animal moved to a snowy place instead of a jungle, what color would it need to be?

TRY THIS TOO

Add a second pop-up layer behind the first so the jungle has depth. Try a river, a cave, or a night-time version with a paper moon.

DID YOU KNOW? · NATURE & ANIMALS

Camouflage helps animals hide in plain sight. Some animals have colors and patterns that match where they live. It makes them hard to spot, which helps them stay safe or sneak up on food. Your paper animal just did the same trick.
